Laser Mondays are back by popular demand!

IPL

A photo-rejuvenation laser process that can correct a variety of skin conditions, such as facial skin imperfections due to sun damage, signs of photo-aging, and other blemishes. After several treatments you can see a significant reduction in unwanted pigmentation.

Fraxel

A Fraxel treatment targets thousands of microscopic areas of skin, using pinpoint laser beams that penetrate beneath the skin's surface to eliminate old, damaged skin cells. The process stimulates the body's natural healing process which replaces damaged skin with fresh, glowing skin

Derm Notes

Acne is a common condition that effects up to 95% of adolescents in Western cultures and persists into adulthood for about 3% of men and 12% of women. Though acne is a superficial condition its impact can be dramatic, causing embarrassment, social anxiety, and permanent scarring. Because of these potential impacts, it is a condition that should be treated aggressively. In the next few newsletters we will be taking a closer look at what acne is and how it can be managed.

The Many Faces of Acne

Acne varies in type and severity. It is not uncommon for a person to have more than one type of acne. Your dermatologist can best evaluate your skin and suggest a treatment regime that is right for you based on your age, gender, and type of acne that you have.

Types of Acne lesions:

Open comedones (white heads): small white texture bumps.

Closed comedones (black heads): small bumps with a dark center.

Papules: red or pink bumps, typically smaller than a pencil eraser.

Pustules: bumps with a visible white or yellow central core.

Nodules: Deep tender red bumps that may leave scarring.
